More than 179 photos from the late 1800s to the early and middle 1900s. True Stories of a Western Woodsman Living off the Land in the Coastal Rain Forests of the Far West and in Alaska: Subsistence Hunting, Trapping and Fishing; Pioneer Days Through the Great Depression and Beyond. This is a truly historical account of a subject rarely covered in depth. Wherever new land is opened up for settlement, hunting is an essential part of living off the land. Hunting techniques are passed along to sons and grandsons. Hunting was year-round, as it must be to feed the family. These stories are true, and include bits of information about how people lived on the Central Oregon Coast in the late 1800s and early 1900s.
