Questions & Answers:

Q: What type of child does this parenting system address?

A: The system presented here caters first and foremost to the unique needs of the strong-willed child. Otherwise known as the spirited child, defiant child, or explosive child, this is a kid who is more prone to power struggles than his average counterparts due to his higher-than-average intensity, persistence, sensitivity, and, often, perceptiveness. The strong-willed child generally learns better through experiment than instruction and has an irrepensible need for independence, and this system is designed to bring out this child's unique potential.

However, the principles in this book are universal and they work well with more mellow and naturally cooperative children as well. The book will also prove helpful with children who may not be clinically "strong-willed," but who are going through a difficult period for whatever reason. Many of the techniques here can also work wonders with the anxious child, the angry child, and the insecure child.

Q: What resources did the author use to develop the parenting system presented in her book?

A: The author's system is based primarily on her research as well as her experiences with her own children. The author was inspired by the following works, among others:

Psycho-Cybernetics by Maxwell Maltz, The Whole-Brain Child by Daniel J Siegel and Tina Payne Bryson, The Power of Habit by Charles Duhigg, The Happiest Toddler on the Block by Dr. Harvey Karp, How to Win Friends and Influence People by Dale Carnegie, The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, by Stephen Covey, Transforming the Difficult Child: The Nurtured Heart Approach by Howard Glasser, and The Road Less Traveled: A New Psychology of Love, Traditional Values and Spiritual Growth by M. Scott Peck.
