Thank You Nosipho Gama

When my ex-husband asked me to marry him again, I was overjoyed. I was happy for us things had worked out, against all odds. It seemed like we had made it, as the song goes. You see I had not stopped loving him. I had not stopped hoping, wishing and praying for another chance. And I had flatly refused to stop nurturing and keeping alive the possibility of us reuniting. Never in my wildest dreams did I think that my forever (for real this time) was not to be. What a difficult thing it was to discover, admit and accept after everything we had been through, and a quarter of a century later, it was truly not meant to be. A year long introspection began which has ended with me being grateful for the past 24 years but eternally thankful for the past twelve months. The darkest hour of my life has given me one of the most valuable experiences and transformed me in ways I could not have imagined. I know, now, why we have been instructed to always count our blessings.
