The quantum computer believed it knew best how to save humanity... even if doing so meant destroying half the population.

Astrophysicist Doug Lockwood has made the discovery of a lifetime: another planet has appeared in our solar system, in orbit opposite that of Earth. Its sudden appearance is unexplained, but the danger presented by the alternate Earth is real, kicking off a chain of events that will carry Lockwood into the grasp of a formidable artificial intelligence bent on accomplishing its goal at any cost. With the survival of our Earth at stake and time running out, Lockwood and his team must find a way to counter this unprecedented threat before the powerful new enemy completes its plan. Two civilizations are pitted against each other in a desperate struggle for survival that may lead to Armageddon for both worlds.

Excerpt:

They turned away from their work at the far wall and started toward the door. They never made it. They were stopped in their tracks by a powerful impact that tore the door from its heavy hinges, flinging it into the room. Friedman was hit in the lower left ribs by the heavy flying door. He collapsed in agony. Nick was dazed and in searing pain. The steel door had clipped him above the right knee, breaking his leg. He was down with the door lying on top of his shattered leg. He knew he was screaming but he could also hear gagging and kicking impacts. He looked up to see a massive figure throttling Friedman, who was struggling like a rag doll. He heard more choked gurgling and then the sound of bones cracking. Friedman went limp.

“Oh my God!” Nick howled, as he flailed and shoved wildly to try and free his ruined leg from under the heavy door. The RAKER snapped open its grip on Friedman. The dead man dropped to the floor with a thump. Then the android turned towards Nick.
