Most counties and cities throughout the country have civil preparedness programs to reduce the loss of life and property in the event of major emergencies. These emergencies can range from natural disasters such as hurricanes, floods, or tornadoes to man-made emergencies like hazardous materials spills, fire, or nuclear attack.

This booklet focuses on the ultimate disaster—nuclear attack. It discusses what individuals and families can do to improve their chances for survival in the event of a nuclear attack on the United States. Basic information is provided on the physical effects of a nuclear detonation, attack warning signals, and what to do before, during, and after an attack.

Much has been done to address emergency needs unique to nuclear attack. Public fallout shelter space has been identified for millions. In addition, some warning and communications networks have been “hardened” against blast and electronic disruptions, preparations have been made to measure fallout radiation, and many local emergency services personnel have been trained in use of radiation detection instruments and other emergency skills.
