When a large, injured bear stumbles into camp, Lori is the only one who isn't afraid of the obviously dangerous situation. Strangely moved, Lori tends to the bear's injury, finding it friendly and strangely intelligent.

The next day, she cannot get the bear out of her mind. Plagued with fevered dreams of being with the creature, Lori wonders if she is going crazy. She sets out to try to find the creature and set her tortured mind at ease.

What she finds is something more than just a bear, and something far more tender and passionate than a mere human can muster ...

Has Lori found her one true bear? Are her dreams about to become a reality?

Is it love or pain?
